We are excited to announce the next edition of our virtual Women’s Book Club! We will meet in February to discuss Text Me When You Get Home: The Evolution and Triumph of Modern Female Friendship by author Kayleen Schaefer.

Through interviews with over 100 women about their best friends, soul mates, and idols, Schaefer weaves a pop culture-focused narrative that challenges the stereotype that women have trouble establishing and maintaining friendships with other women, and examines the evolution of female relationships from competition to a culture of support and community.

Text Me When You Get Home has been heralded as an uplifting, deeply reported work of cultural analysis with a uniquely validating perspective on how women are reclaiming the power of female friendship.

We look forward to a lively discussion with the author and sharing our own perspectives on friendship. Register to receive your copy of Text Me When You Get Home and join us on February 23.

Please also keep an eye out for the end-of-year survey coming soon. We received many wonderful book suggestions last year, and invite you to once again complete this survey to help shape our programming for 2022!

“A memoir of female friendship issues a call to action for BFFs everywhere.” — The New York Times Book Review

“Reading Text Me When You Get Home feels like experiencing its subject—the intimate, slow-burning, miraculously comfortable thrill of making and keeping a lifelong friend. Kayleen Schaefer’s affectionate and clear-sighted exploration of female friendship is as romantic as a movie and as honest as the conversation on the third day of a road trip; reading it is as delightful as walking into a bar on a weeknight to see your friend already seated and ordering your drink.” — Jia Tolentino, staff writer at The New Yorker and author of the breakout essay collection "Trick Mirror."

“Text me when you get home.’ Those six words aren’t just about getting home safely at the end of the night—they’re really a story about how special and fierce friendships are between women.” — NPR’s Book Concierge
